County arson investigators are trying to determine the cause of a fire that stroyed a trailer house in BaySide Park Tuesday.

The trailer was owned by J.D. Ellis of Rt. 7, Bay St. Louis.

Ellis and his wife were not at home when the fire was discovered shortly before 11 a.m. and reported to the Han-cock County Sheriff's Department.

According to Gordon Courrege, viceident of BaySide Volunteer Fire Department, the trailer was already engulfed in flame when firefighters ar

Teenager to be released after 43 days in jail

By NAN PATTON EHRBRIGHT A 13-year-old boy who has been held in detention at Hancock County Jail since May 16 with no criminal charges against him is scheduled to be released today for placement in a Laurel youth facility.

The Echo learned Wednesday afternoon that the youth was placed in custody of the Hancock County Welfare Denartment in late January or early February when his mother said he was uncontrollable.

After placement in a shelter home for 30 days—the maximum allowed by law—the boy was allowed to go home. Within two weeks further problems arose at home and the boy was placed in a children's home.

Problems there resulted in his placement in a foster home for three or four days, after which he ran away following an argument with his foster mother.

At that time welfare officials asked the Youth Court to hold the boy in detention pending a hearing.

Sheriff Ronald Peterson confirmed yesterday that the boy has been in jail since May 16.

A hearing held May 22 resulted in Youth Court Referee Michael Haas remanding the boy to the custody of the sheriff's department until 'suitable and proper placement could be secured by the website department.

Task force concept should prove good for Hancock Chamber

The recent decision by the Hancock County Chamber of Commerce's board of directors to change to a task force concept is a step in the right direction.

More and more organizations, especially chambers of commerce, are now operating as task forces, instead of committees in order to accomplish their objectives.

A task force sets its sights on one specific goal, selects a leader, and everyone puts a concentrated effort into accomplishing the objective.

We are living in an era of fast change, and we feel the chamber will be able to accomplish even more for the community under the new structure.

The Hancock Chamber over the years has been highly successful in promoting the county, our cities and our businesses.

Life styles of so many of us have changed, and those volunteering their talents and efforts to organizations do not have the time to devote to committees with only a few attempting to complete a project.

A task force involves many more people, each doing a bit, and the objectives are accomplished much faster with less effort on the part of those helping.

TAX REFORM: WHAT'S YOUR VIEW?

There is growing reason to be op-timistic that this Administration is seriously tackling tax reform. As I have discussed previously, President Reagan has directed the Secretary of the Treasury to develop a plan to make the tax system more fair for all tax-

The best part of that directive is that we all have the opportunity to have our say in how that reform should be carried out.

During the month of June, the Treasury Department is holding hearings throughout the country to solicit the views of interested individuals and groups with proposals for improving our tax system. Those persons unable to attend the scheduled meetings, none of which will be held in Mississippi, are encouraged to file their views in writing by November 30 with: Treasury Tax Reform Study, Department of the Treasury, P.O. Box 299, Washington, D.C. 20044.

Relying on this public input, the Secretary of the Treasury will submit a plan to the President in early December with the recommendation that it form the basis of major tax reform legislation to be considered by the 99th Congress next January.

The problems with the federal tax code are pretty obvious to most folks I hear from and center on its overcomplication and the perception that not everyone pays their fair share.

In a democracy like ours, the tax code should be understandable to the average taxpayer, but the fact of the matter is that the present code is not even completely understood by the Internal Revenue Service itself.

A 1975 IRS survey of its trained employees showed that they computed the wrong tax 72 percent of the time, even when handling relatively simple tax problems. A Tax Reform Research Group recently sent identical "test" tax returns to 22 different IRS offices. Each office calculated a different tax liability, ranging from a high refund of $811.96 to a tax underpayment of $52.14.

Is it any surprise then that the average taxpayer throws up his hands in frustration every April?

Then there's the issue of fairness While questions of fairness surely will arise under any system of taxation, our current code compounds the problem with its confusing and contradictory policies. For example, a person earning $20,000 makes twice as much as a person earning $10,000 but pays three times more in taxes.

I recently joined in introducing in the House of Representatives a simplified income tax plan which has a single tax rate. This flat tax proposal does away with tax tables for individuals and keeps some present deductions for in-terest (including mortgage interest), real property taxes, charitable contributions, and retirement plans such as IRAs, Keoghs and social security. But most other tax preferences are eliminated.

With its simplicity, protection for families and the poor, and increased incentives to work, save and invest, this simplified income tax plan, I think, is one which families across the country

Only 30 percent of women report they have practiced self-examination at least once a month during the past year, which is the recommended frequency for practicing BSE.

In response to these findings, the American Institute for Cancer Research has this month launched a public education campaign designed to encourage and remind women to perform regular breast self-examination.

U.S. Transportation Department offers tips on vacation driving

VACATION DRIVING

The big day has finally arrived! The car is loaded to the gills with everything but grandma's china; and you and your spouse are busy cross-examining each other about having enough money for the trip, whether the basement door was locked, and if the paperboy was given the word to stop delivery.

The kids are anguing over who gets to still by the window, and stepping on each sit by the window, and stepping on each other's toes to put the first scuff marks on their new sneakers. But eventually everything is as ready as it ever will be and you back down the driveway and set a course for the vacation that seemed like it would never come.

Unfortunately, in the excitement to get away from it all, some people forget that there are important differences between local driving and vacation driving. Trips around town are not the same as driving long distances on interstate highways in parts of the country that are not familiar to you.

There are a few standard but simple driving practices people should follow on long or short trips...like everyone in the car wearing a safety belt, and obeythe car wearing a sarety belt, and obey-ing posted speed limits. Simple things, really, but they may mean the dif-ference between life and death, and can go a long way toward making certain at your vacation is as safe and en-mat your vacation is as sare and enjoyable as you want it to be.

Your vacation shouldn't begin, however, until you have first prepared your car for the trip. Remember—don't wait until the last minute; start you preparations at least a couple of weeks before you plan to leave. Preparing your car or van is as important as preparing yourself.

A small amount of preventive

A small amount or preventive maintenance can avoid a time-consuming and costly delay on the road. If your trip is to be a long one, make sure the engine is properly tuned.

This initial expense can save you big dollars and hassles on the road. Vehicles in top running shape are not likely to break down in places where mechanics aren't nearby. A tune up before you leave can also improve per-formance and fuel economy.

There's some extra equipment you might want to take along for emergen-cies. Included are a tool kit, flares, flashlight and extra batteries, an extra quart of motor oil, a five gallon empty gasoline can, replacement drive belts, and a container of fresh water for the

and serviced as necessary.

Be sure to check the tires for tread Be sure to check the tires for tread and pressure, Badly worn tires are extremely dangerous and should be replaced. Remember, with the entire family plus all of your luggage and other equipment, your car and tires may be loaded to capacity. Inflate your tires to the maximum inflation pressure recommended by the vehicle manufacturer. You can find the inflation information placard or sticker on the car door post be inside the glove compartment door, for check your owners amunal. Don't forget to check the pressure of your spare tire in case.

Better yet, every the car seats of this exposed skin of an infant or young child. When the outside temperature is 79 degrees, sunlight can heat the vinyl seat in a closed car to 192 degrees!

The best way to protect children from such burns is to test the temperature of a seat before putting, your child on it.

Better yet, every the car seats of this aftery seat with a light colored biance or towel. Try to acquire the habit of looking for a stady spot to park your gar when you stop.

Again, don't forget the most imporsure of your spare tire in case the pressure of your spare tire in case you need it.

Now, for the trip itself—first and foremost wear your safety belts. If you're not among the growing number of Americans who are regular users; you might be pleasantly surprised to find that today's safety belts are comfortable and easy to get into the habit of using. They will alk give you pasce of mind knowing that you are giving yourself and your family the best preceded and your family the best preceded and some for the country.

Again, don't forget the most important and adverted at all—wear your safety your safety belts have been found to prevent 50 to 65 percent of all fatalities in car, crashes.

It's the first and last auto safety the store or travelling across the country.

Many police officers will readily the dead person' from a car crash.

Safety belts have been of all fatalities in car, crashes.

Many police officers will readily the your safety belts make sense for your tection available in the event of a crash of the country of or sudden high speed stop.

Small children should be properly buckled into a safety seat. In fact, 46 states now have laws requiring them for children under certain ages, and chances are that you will pass through chances are that you wan gas through one or more of these states. Second, keep in mind that speed limits should be carefully observed for both highway and city driving.

Take a little time to plan the day's travel, and repeat the process every night during the trip. If you like, try us-ing a felt-tipped pen to mark your route on a map so you'll know exactly where and how far you are going. Choose a set number of miles or hours to travel and plan to stop on schedule to prevent fatigue. Experts agree that six hours a day or 300 miles—whichever comes first—is a reasonable day's drive. After that, reflexes and alertness diminish significantly.

Plan to stop frequently to rest. You'll help prevent highway hypnosis, that drowzy feeling that most of us have experienced behind the wheel at one time or another. As mile turns into endless mile on a turnpike, your mind tends to go to sleep. It's difficult to fight off this dangerous lulling of your senses, and periodic stops are the best antidote.

Flat tires are a nuisance, but they happen to everyone sooner or later. If you have a puncture or a blowout, pull off the road completely to change it...the further off the road the better. At night, put flares out at least 100 feet behind your car and turn on your emergency flashers. If there is not enough room to park safely on the shoulder, drive slow-ly to the closest safe area out of traffic. This may ruin the flat tire, but your safety is worth the price.

A few other tips to cover special situations should be mentioned. Driving in extreme hot weather, for example, calls for special precautions. Carry extra water in canteens for your family and your car.

Make sure the radiator and battery Make sure the radiator and battery are full, and watch the temperature gauge on the dashboard carefully...it's often the first sign of impending trou-ble. And don't take a chance on running

Especially if you are in rural or remote areas; keep a diel reserve of about 100 miles that could be as much as half a tank on some cars. Top off the tank frequently rather than driving un-til the tank is almost empty before Another important item on this checklist of safety tips for summer travellers is to avoid burns to children.

Part of this work, along with other projects of the Port and Harbor Commission, was advertised for proposals on July 8, 1982. Haas argued the commission has subsequently followed improper pro-cedures that cut Smith out of the work. Also, Haas said, comments accusing Smith of overcharging which were discussed around the county influenced the commission's recommendation to award the new contract to Borgen.

"It reached such an extent that federal authorities came in here and inrecent autorness came in here and in-vestigated these allegations," Haas said, noting a report from the Federal Aviation Administration stating the commission's agreement with Smith was satisfactory and engineering fees were reasonable.

"We submit there have been some erroneous allegations concerning ADI at the time ADI was being considered for this contract, and it certainly prejudiced their position.'

Commission Attorney Gerald Gex advised the supervisors Monday that another engineering firm, Simpkins and Costelli Inc. of Gulfport, has also filed a protest in the matter.

Smith was named engineer of record by the commission in July 1982 with approval of the board.

"The FAA has to approve the con tract before we go to work," he added.
"If there's any extra engineering—and there has been in both contracts with Bond—it's been authorized."

Both Haas and Smith said the com-mission violated federal regulations in procuring the contract with Borgen.

A $500,000 grant has been approved by the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development to be used as matching money for the $1.5 million project, with a grant from Economic Development Administration contributing $730,000 of the total.

The remaining $230,000 will come from county funds.

One sure sign of summer is the delicious aroma rising from a charcoal

Outdoor cookery, a favorite American pastime, has grown to include not only familiar steaks but also roasts, vegetables, breads and desserts, all prepared on a griff in the backyard or at a campsite.

This is a perfect idea for a July to celebration elaborate the outdoor meal a few guidelines on selecting and preparing the meat are helpful. Shop around for the best buy m meet

Two favorites are beef and ports, so look for sales on beef steaks and park chops. When a good buy is found, stock up on these items if freezer space is available.

Also, don't ignore economy cuts. Beef chuck steaks are delicious when marinated. Marinating has a tenderizing effect and the chuck can be grilled, to perfection.

Grilled pork blade steaks are also very tasty.

Take advantage of roasts such as beef sirloin tip roasts, rump roasts or pork butt roasts. These are delicious used for shish kabobs. Just cut the meat into cubes and marinate with the vegetables in the refrigerator for Alternate the meat with such items as rucchini squash, cherry tomatoes, green pepper, onions, mushrooms, small pre-cooked potatoes or pineapple. Baste with the marinade or a favorite barbecue sauce while cooking.

If a barbecue sauce with high sugar content is chosen, wait until the end of the cooking time to apply, because it has a tendency to burn easily.

Pork needs a low to moderate temperature for cooking with about two inches between coals when broiling

Stanislaus cheerleaders take honors at clinic

Diamondhead Golf winners listed

The St. Stanislaus Varsity Cheerleaders attended the Elite Cheerleading Clinic held at Mississippi Gulf Coast Junior College in Perkinston, Miss.

The Elite Cheerleading Association instructors made a special presentation to the St. Stanislaus cheerleaders in which they were recognized as most friendly, cheerful and compatible squad at the clinic and the squad which cooperated most wholeheartedly with clinic activities in addition to this award, senior Con-nally Compretta was chosen as one of five all-stars from the total number of girls attending the clinic. This marked the second consecutive year that Compretta has earned the all-star rating. Compretta is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Compretta of Bay St.

Adult leaders appeal for support of summer AAU basketball program

For the past three years, 1981-84, Hancock, County has fielded com-petitive AAU basketball teams.

High school boys participate in summer league; basketball competition along the Gulf Coast and in southern Louisiana.

along the Guit Coast and in southern Louisiana.

For the past two years, Bay St. Louis Senior High School has produced local talent such as Kenneth Cline, Barry Frederick, and T.J. Farve.

Notables on the 1984 squad include Wes Dedeaux, Milas Harvey, Dexter Bell, of Bay High; and James Bass, Tom Walton, Kris Geroux, Trent Tate and others from St. Stanislaus High who will carry on winning traditions for their respective schools.

Spearheading this program is Calvin. R. Smith.

Others who support Smith are Bay Senior High Athletic Director Wilmer eymour, Coaches Willie Bradley and Barney Necaise and Brother Anton from St. Stanislaus High.

Financial support has been given by local businessmen, including Ronnie Artigue, contractor; and Eugene O.

Arigue, contractor; and Eugene O. Richardson, surveyor.

Thowever, the AAU program is in need of other financial support.

Each tournament in which the team competes costs in excess of $60 for entry fees alone.

The last two tournaments were inderwritten by Smith.

"This has gotten to be a rather expensive proposition," he states, "but I would not want to see this program scrapped. Therefore I am appealing to local businesses for financial support in this endeavor."

The AAU team will compete in a minimum of five tournaments this sum-mer and plans to sponsor its own tour-nament on July 19-21 at Bay Senior gram is needed, Smith adds.

This is the first year for St. Stanislaus participation in the program.

Brother Anton, SSC coach, views this program as a way of improving the atilietic skills and abilities of his players throughout the year.

Subsequently, his team also has a regular season head start on other teams from surrounding areas that do not have AAU programs.

Smith and Brother Anton are seeking support from local merchants for a summer basketball developmental sgue which would eventually include (age groups) boys and girls, as well young adult group.

The prospects for such a program ap-pear bright, Smith feels. Movement is sponsorship of the 1964 All baskethall team, he reminded.

Bay High head coach resigns

By NAN PATTON EHRBRIGHT James "Snuffy" Smith, Bay St. Louis High School head football coach for the past five years, confirmed yesterday that he has resigned from the Bay St.

Louis Separate Municipal School His present plans, he said, are to pursue a career with Alistate Insurance Company in the Bay St. Louis/Waveland area.

"The community and the school system have been good to me," Smith said, "and I want to express my deep gratitude. "I leave the coaching field with mix-ed emotions," he said, "due to the fact that I had such a commitment to that particular career. "When you have that type of commitment and love, it's hard to change."

Smith said he has been contemplating a career change for two to three years but 'an opportunity had not arisen until kids they are."

Smith will still be supporting the Tigers, be said.

'I just won't be doing it in the same

Smith, 30, noted that a career change is an important step in a person's life. "I am fortunate to have an opportunity to remain in the area even though

I'm changing careers."
Smith, a native of Marion County, is a raduate of Pearl River College and Delta State University. He joined the Bay school district eight years ago, spending his first year as junior high school head football coach and boys' track coach. For the next two years he served as assistant football coach at the high school and for the past five years he has been head football coach and boys' track coach at Bay High.

The 32nd annual Southern Fine Arts Festival has been iset for July 8-13 on the University of Southern Mississippi campus

Two camps will be offered this year, according to Dr. Richard Prenshaw, festival director. The Twirling and Auxiliary Camp, directed by Greogane Love, and the Dixie Darling Camp, directed by Karen Quarnstrom, will both be July 8-13.

The auxiliary camp for flag and rifle corps, drum majors and twirlers will include awards for outstanding solo and ensemble twirlers, strutting, drum major, flag and rifle corps, as well as swimsuit and talent shows.

Flag and rifle corps members will learn basic drill and movement as well as how to design routines. Drum maand freestyle instruction. The twirlers will receive instruction in solo, ensemble, fire and two-baton twirling. The Dixie Darling camp will provide instruction in choreography, routines, dance fundamentals and rehearsal organization. Individual school units in both camps will

Martin Marietta rated superior by NASA

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration has awarded Martin Marietta Aerospace the firm's 14th con-secutive 'superior' rating for its Space Shuttle launch processing perfor-

In its evaluation report of the company's work NASA noted that 'Martin Marietta continued to do a superior job processing external tanks and operating the propellant facilities' at the Kennedy Space Center in Florida.

The space agency also recognized the firm for its 'competent and effective administration and business systems that fully comply with all contractual committments' and the company's 'effective new technology program.'

NASA, which evaluates the work and assigns an award fee based on contract performance, has awarded Martin Marietta 100 percent ratings since 1976 when the company began processing the Space Shuttle's external fuel tanks at Kennedy Space Center.

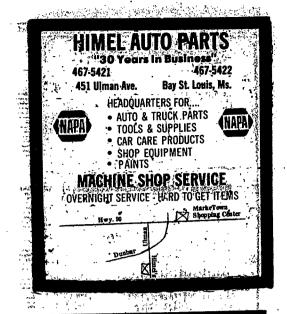

The firm's Michoud Division manufactures the giant Shuttle fuel tanks in New Orleans for NASA's Marshall Space Flight Center. One external tank is used on each Shuttle flight.

To match the growing number of Space Shuttle flights by both NASA and the Air Force, Martin Marietta is increasing the rate of tank production to reach 24 per year by the late 1980s.

While increasing the production rate, Martin Marietta has reduced both the manufacturing costs and the amount of time required to build each tank.

The man-hours needed to build a tank have been reduced by 116,000 hours, down to 150,000 from 266,000 hours.

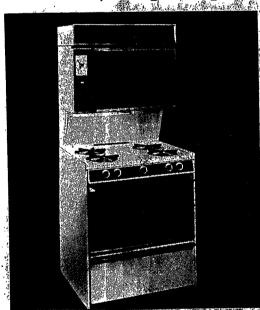

Martin Marietta Aerospace has delivered 18 tanks to NASA, with five more scheduled for delivery by the end

A $125,000 grant from Meredith Cosposition, a diversified media company involveu primarily in publishing, printing propagating and real estate as well as courses in magazine editorial marketing/franchising, will fund a and business management, service model program in service journalism journalism practice, technical writing, at The University of Mississippi. The funds will be used over a five-year period to implement a block of improvement of the proposition of th ournalism courses geared to the production and management of magazines and other periodicals—service publica-tions that provide information and ideas to their readers.

Meredith Corporation, head-"news," said Norton. quartered in Des Moines, Iowa, "While news is important, any objecpublishes such major magazines as tive analysis of the media shows that "Better Homes and Gardens," "Suc. broadcast media are moving toward cessful Farming," "Metropolitan entertainment—even in presenting the Home," "Country Home" and "Better Homes and Gardens WOOD." The company also publishes "Sail" magazine through a wholly-owned subsidiary as well as a line of books and special interest publications which carry the Better Homes and Gardens trademark

Bob Burnett, president and chief ex-ecutive officer of Meredith, recently sented the first in a series of five 25,000 checks to Dr. Gerald Turner, Burnett explained the purpose of the Meredith Service Journalism Program is to develop a core service journalism component in the magazine sequences of select journalism schools and to create an awareness of the need for service journalism curricula among leading educators and professional ournalism organizations.

"To my knowledge," Burnett said,

"this is the first service journalism program of its type in the United States." Meredith Corporation, which has more than 80 years of experience in providing information to its readers has ong advocated the service role of jour-

James A. Autry, senior vice president and general manager for Meredith's: Publishing Group and a distinguished journalism graduate of the university, defines it as journalism that 'goes beyond the delivery of pure informa-

"Service journalism includes an expectation that the reader will do something as a result of the reading," said Autry

"It is problem-solving journalism. It is action journalism in that it somehow moves the reader to action and chances his pr her life.

"It could be using a product to better advantage, trying a different approach to parenting, improving the day-to-day relationship with a spouse, trying harder on the job because of a new-found pride or greater understanding of company goals, voting more knowledgeably at a stockholders or credit union meeting."

"The role of the contemporary editor goes well beyond that of writer or reporter," he said. "The service magazine should not only report trends to readers but also should interpret them, or even create them."

We're extremely pleased to offer service journalism as a special emphasis in our journalism curriculum,"

"There is a need to break out of journalism's traditional preoccupation with news. That leaves print generally, and magazines specifically, as the real medium of information."

"A great majority of the many thousands of magazines in the country are involved with some aspect of non-news, information journalism."
"What has not kept pace with this development is journalism education," said. "This generous contribution will allow us to further refine Meredith Corporation's solid definition of service journalism, to develop academic programs for its study, and prepare our graduates for meaningful careers in the

The $125,000 will be used over a fiveyear period, with thorough analysis of the program at the end of the third and
